U.K. Eyes Al Qaeda Network

Third suspect arrested in London bombing attempts

LONDON | British police arrested a third man in connection with last week's failed attack against London's transit system and said Sunday they were trying to penetrate what they suspect is an al Qaeda network behind the plot.

Police Commissioner Sir Ian Blair expressed deep regret to the family of Jean Charles de Menezes, the Brazilian electrician shot dead by police on the subway Friday after he was mistaken for a terrorist. Blair called the killing a "tragedy," but defended officers' right to use deadly force against suspected terrorists.

Blair

The latest arrest was made Saturday in an area near London's southern Stockwell neighborhood, Tulse Hill, where Menezes had lived and near the subway station where he was killed. The man was arrested "on suspicion of the commission, instigation or preparation of acts of terrorism," said a police spokeswoman on customary condition of anonymity.

Blair said he suspected an al Qaeda network was involved in last Thursday's failed attacks. He had previously said al Qaeda was probably linked to the July 7 attacks as well in which four suicide bombers killed 52 people and themselves.

In Washington, meanwhile, U.S. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said he believed the attacks in London and Saturday's deadly bombings in Egypt both were organized by al Qaeda. MICHAEL McDONOUGH (AP)

SINGLES | In the Market for Love A Wal-Mart in Roanoke, VA., has ditched a program to help single shoppers find love in store aisles. Wal-Mart officials ordered the store to end Singles Shopping, the only program of its kind at Wal-

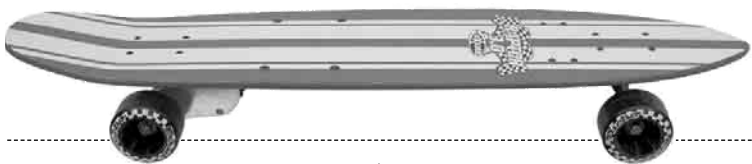

Mart's U.S. stores. On Fridays, customers could pick up a red bow to place on their shopping carts as an invitation to other singles. "Flirt points" were set up in sections of the store. Store employees said some customers complained. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

LOGOS

Corporate Branding Taken Too Far

A woman who was branded with letters from the Consolidated Edison logo when she fell off a skateboard onto a searing hot manhole cover in New York last year filed a lawsuit Thursday against the utility. Elizabeth C. Wallenberg, 27, was burned just above her buttocks and on her left arm when she fell off her skateboard onto a cover over a steam pipe in August, said her lawyer, Ronald Berman. "It literally looked like a brand that had been applied by someone," Berman said about the permanent burn marks left on Wallenberg's body. (AP)

While I'm Here, Try Me on Both Incidents

A Sioux City, Iowa, man who led officers on a highway chase to a courthouse Wednesday barricaded himself in the courtroom he was scheduled to appear in, officials said. Police were pursuing a truck suspected in a hit-and-run when driver Jada Coover backed the vehicle into the courthouse wall and ran inside to the room where he was expected to answer to drug charges, police said. The judge had just dismissed the jury, but Coover held the door so they couldn't leave. Officers eventually got in for the arrest. (AP)

HOT AIR

Balloonatics

Lance Armstrong wasn't the only one setting new records in France during the past weekend. A whopping 261 hot-air balloons took off simultaneously in Chambley on Saturday in an attempt to break the world record. The feat was one of the many huge-balloon-related goings-on at the biennial Mondial Air Ballons-Lorraine 2005 festival. The event, which was attended by about 1,000 balloon teams from 67 countries across five continents, was the ninth since the first was held in 1989.

MISPLACED OBJECTS

Husband Clam Now Trying to Find It

A Branford, Conn., man who was clamming Tuesday said he made the ultimate catch: the wedding ring he lost two years ago. Stewart Petrie said he found an encrusted ring mixed in with his clams while he was clamming at the same spot where his ring slipped off his finger in July 2003. After his wife, Mary, scrubbed it with jewelry cleaner, they were able to read the inscription: "MPS to SJP 9-10-67." "It was an absolutely stupendous feeling," Stewart Petrie said. The Petries say they eventually plan to have a jeweler restore the ring. But, in the meantime, it isn't leaving his finger. (AP)

Gonzales: Patriot Act Necessary

Blasts in Britain, Egypt show need for measure, attorney general says

WASHINGTON | Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said Sunday that bombings in London and Egypt make a strong case for renewing the post-9/11 anti-terrorism law that critics say infringes on civil liberties.

Gonzales also credited the Patriot Act with preventing a follow-up to the domestic terrorist attack on Sept. 11, 2001, that killed nearly 3,000 people, most in New York and Washington.

Gonzales

The House voted 257-171 last week to extend the law indefinitely but limit to 10 years two of its most debated provisions: allowing federal agents to use roving wiretaps and to search library and medical records. Those provisions are set to expire at the end of the year.

The Senate Judiciary Committee cleared its own extension of the law and called for Congress to re-examine the wiretap and library provisions after four years.

The full Senate is likely to vote on its version of the bill in the fall. (AP)

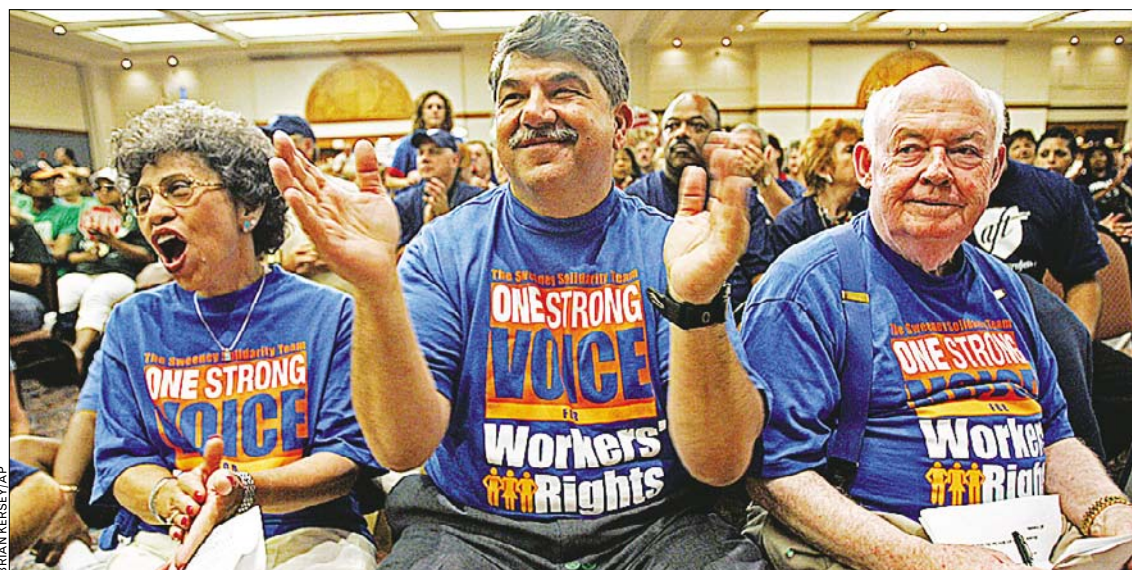

AFL-CIO to Lose Its Largest Union

One of four boycotting groups to quit, citing slide in organized labor

CHICAGO | The AFL-CIO succumbed to division Sunday, with its largest union deciding to bolt the 50-year-old federation and three others poised to do so in a dispute over how to reverse organized labor's long slide.

The four unions, representing nearly one-third of the AFL-CIO's 13 million members, announced Sunday they would boycott the federation's convention that begins Monday. They are part of the Coalition to Win, a group of seven unions vowing to reform the labor movement — outside the AFL-CIO if necessary.

The Service Employees International Union, with 1.8 million members, plans to announce Monday that it is leaving the AFL-CIO, said several labor officials who spoke on condition of anonymity because they are not authorized to discuss the developments.

The Teamsters union also was on the verge of disaffiliating, and would likely be the first to follow

SEIU's lead, the officials said. Two other boycotting unions were likely to leave the federation: United Food and Commercial Workers and UNITE HERE, a group of textile and hotel workers.

If all four boycotting unions quit the federation, they would take about $35 million from the AFL-CIO, which has already been forced to lay off a quarter of its 400-person staff. RON FOURNIER (AP)

NASA to Launch Shuttle Despite Glitch

CAPE CANAVERAL, FLA. | NASA said Sunday it will launch the first space shuttle flight in 2 1/2 years even if Discovery is plagued by the same fuel gauge problem that halted the previous countdown two weeks ago.

Discovery is set to lift off Tuesday at 10:39 a.m., the same time Columbia took off on its doomed mission in 2003.

At a news conference, Deputy shuttle program manager Wayne Hale and other NASA officials found themselves defending the decision to launch with a fuel gauge failure. They stressed that they will proceed with a liftoff only if the problem is well understood and involves the gauges in question — anything else will result in a postponement.

NASA's own launch rule — in place since the 1986 Challenger disaster — requires that all four hydrogen fuel gauges in the external tank be working properly. Going with three out of four would result in a "deviation" of the rule, Hale told reporters.

"I am committed — and I think the whole team is committed — to doing this in a safe manner," Hale said. (AP)

Democrats Seek Roberts' Papers

White House resists releasing documents by high court nominee

WASHINGTON | Citing privacy and precedent, the Bush administration indicated Sunday it does not intend to release all memos and other documents written by Supreme Court nominee John Roberts when he worked for two Republican presidents.

Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the leading Democrat on the Senate Judiciary Committee, which will conduct hearings on Roberts' nomination, disputed the assertion that privacy was at stake and called such a position a "red herring."

Roberts worked in the Reagan White House counsel's office from 1982-1986. He also was principal deputy solicitor general in the administration of the first President Bush.

Fred D. Thompson, the former Tennessee senator who is guiding Roberts through the nomination process on behalf of the White House, said material that would come under attorney-client privilege would be withheld. He contended that previous administrations, both Republican and Democrat, have followed that principle. "We hope we don't get into a situation where doc-

Egyptian Police Create Attack Timeline

Officials: Blasts that killed 88 highly coordinated

SHARM EL-SHEIK, EGYPT | The bombers who carried out Egypt's worst-ever terrorist attack appear to have entered this Red Sea resort in pickup trucks loaded with explosives that were hidden under vegetables, security officials said Sunday. Police were searching for three suspects believed to have survived the bombings.

One truck headed for the luxury Ghazala Gardens hotel. There, one man planted a bomb in a suitcase in a parking lot, while another slammed the vehicle into the Ghazala hotel's reception area, the security officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the investigation.

As people fled the Ghazala attack, the suitcase exploded and killed at least seven people, said the officials.

A second truck, on a road leading to another major hotel, got stuck in traffic in the Old Market — an area frequented by Egyptian workers in the resort area on the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula. Two militants inside abandoned the vehicle, apparently setting a timer, and the blast detonated soon after, the officials said.

Before the attacks, the militants rubbed serial numbers off the trucks' engines, the officials said. The numbers had been a key clue Egyptian investigators had used to track down those behind similar vehicle bombings last October against two resorts farther north in the Sinai Peninsula.

According to local hospitals, Saturday's pre-dawn bombings killed at least 88 people. (AP)

Judiciary Admits to Human Rights Abuses in Prisons

In an unprecedented report, Iran's hard-line judiciary acknowledged widespread human rights violations in prisons, including the use of torture, state-run media reported Sunday. The report, which was broadcast on state-run radio and appeared on the front page of several newspapers, said a judicial investigation had discovered human rights violations including the "blindfolding and beating" of defendants, a 13-year-old boy jailed for stealing a hen and a woman who was imprisoned because her husband was a fugitive. Doll released a follow-up study in 2004 that showed at least half of people who begin smoking in their youth are eventually killed by the habit. (AP)

Victims' Families Brought to Scenes of London Bombings

LONDON | Families of those killed in London's July 7 terrorist attacks were brought Sunday to grieve privately at the places where their loved ones died, days before one of the subway stations was to reopen to the public.

Police also arranged a briefing for 230 relatives and friends of the killed and injured intended to update them on the investigation.

Among them were some of the walking wounded — one man still had his right eye patched; another was on crutches. "People have been upset but very emotional, but the briefing was worthwhile and we hope the families have got something out of it," said Superintendent Annette Wightman, in charge of the police's Family Assistance Center.

At Aldgate Underground railway station, due to reopen in the coming week, police cordoned off the sidewalks to keep the press and public away. Two Red Cross medics were on hand in case the grieving relatives were overcome.

Fifty-two people and four suicide bombers died on July 7, when bombs tore through three Underground trains and a bus in central London at rush hour. (AP)

Quake Triggers Fears of Tsunami

Tembler rattles India, Indonesia; no reports of major damage, injuries

NEW DELHI | A major earthquake of at least 7.0 magnitude hit India's southern Nicobar Islands on Sunday, triggering panic in the islands and prompting Thailand to issue a tsunami warning for the region devastated by December's earthquake and tsunami.

There were no immediate reports of casualties or damages. The islands are in the Indian Ocean between India and Thailand, where some 5,400 people died in the Dec. 26 Indian Ocean tsunami. By late Sunday, no tsunami was seen and Thailand withdrew its warning.

The Indian Ocean basin was battered by the December earthquake and tsunami which followed, killing at least 178,953 people in 11 countries and leaving 49,616 people missing, most of them presumed dead. Sunday's quake also was felt in Indonesia's Aceh province, the area hit hardest in December.

Aceh residents, jolted from their sleep, said the quake rattled their homes for about 10 seconds. Some went outside to look for damage, returning when none was found.

The National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., reported an earthquake of 7.0 magnitude hit near the Nicobar Islands.

The quake was centered about 80 miles west of Misha, Nicobar Island. The earthquake was magnitude 7.2, struck at 9:12 p.m. and was centered in Nicobar, said I. B. A. Rao, a duty officer in New Delhi's Meteorology Department.

"There is nothing to worry about," India's Science and Technology Minister Kapil Sibal said Sunday in dismissing another tsunami. He said there had been no significant rise in the sea level two hours after the quake.

Bomb Kills at Least 22 At Iraqi Police Station

BAGHDAD | A suicide bomber detonated a truck packed with explosives outside a Baghdad police station Sunday, killing at least 22 people in the country's deadliest attack in a week.

The attack on the Rashad police station in the neighborhood of Mashtal came during a blinding sandstorm. Barricades prevented the bomber from reaching the station, but the huge blast destroyed two dozen cars and damaged nearby shops.

Police and hospital officials said 22 people — most of them civilians — were killed and about 30 were injured. The U.S. military, citing initial Iraqi police reports, said 40 people were killed, but police said they were uncertain where that fig-

U.S. Employing Afghans in Local Projects

URGUN, AFGHANISTAN | With escalating violence threatening Afghanistan's future, the U.S. military has a new focus: employ as many of the poor as possible to rebuild schools and medical clinics so they don't join the Taliban or al Qaeda.

A string of reconstruction projects are on the drawing board for fall and winter, when militants are quiet, in an attempt to prevent an insurgent offensive next spring. (AP)

Capitol May Get Flight 93 Marker

Victims' families say hijacked 9/11 flight needs D.C. memorial

WASHINGTON | With support from the victims' families, an effort is under way to install a small memorial to the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93 within the walls of the Capitol.

Advocates say a tribute — in addition to the larger, national memorial planned at the western Pennsylvania site where the plane crashed — is appropriate because the terrorists were likely headed for either it or the White House on Sept. 11, 2001, when Flight 93 was hijacked.

"It's going to be tastefully done," said Rep. Bill Shuster, R-Pa., who filed legislation in the House supporting the memorial along with Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa.

It may just end up as a plaque. A hearing on the plan is scheduled for Tuesday before the House subcommittee on Economic Development, Public Buildings and Emergency Management, which Shuster chairs.

The bill passed July 18 in the Senate.

The 16-member board of Families of Flight 93 Inc. approved a resolution this past week in favor of a Washington memorial, said D. Hamilton Peterson, the group's president. KIMBERLY HEFLING (AP)

Police Arrest D.C.'s Shadow Senator

WASHINGTON | Paul Strauss, the District of Columbia's shadow senator, was charged with disorderly conduct following a weekend run-in with authorities.

He was arrested Friday night on the Georgetown waterfront while with a group of people who were

Police said Strauss confronted police officers as they arrested another man, something D.C.'s non-voting statehood advocate denies. (AP)

Burnett Gets It Done From Both Sides in 4-1 Victory

A.J. Burnett homered and pitched into the eighth inning, and Miguel Cabrera connected for the third straight game to lead the Florida Marlins past the San Francisco Giants 4-1 Sunday. Burnett (7-6), whose name has come up in trade talk for weeks, won his second straight start in his first outing at SBC Park since 2001. He hit his third career homer on the first pitch he saw from Kevin Correia (1-2) with one out in the third. (AP)

Burnett only added to his trade value with his eight-inning performance.

Sam Hornish Jr. had to pass Dario Franchitti twice in the waning laps before pulling away for a hard-earned victory in the A.J. Foyt 225 on Sunday. ALL ALONE: Hector Carrasco stands on the mound after giving up the game-winning homer in the 14th inning of a 4-1 loss Sunday.

Punchless Nats Lose Again

Patterson strikes out 10, but Washington falls 4-1 in 14 innings

NATIONALS | He might not like the title, but Washington Nationals pitcher John Patterson is the master of the no decision.

Once again Sunday, a stellar outing by the right-hander was wasted as the sliding Nationals fell victim to Eric Bruntlett's three-run homer off Hector Carrasco with two outs in the 14th inning of the Houston Astros' 4-1 victory.

The Nationals have lost four of five — including three of four to Houston — and 13 of 18. Washington remained tied with the Braves for first place in the NL East as it heads into a three-game showdown for first place starting Tuesday in Atlanta.

"If we go into Atlanta and hit the way we're going, we don't have a chance," said manager Frank Robinson, whose team is hitting .170 since the All-Star break.

No one has suffered from the lack of offense more than Patterson, who is only 4-2 over 18 starts despite his 2.58 ERA. Sunday, he struck out 10 batters and gave up one run in eight innings.

The Nationals not only lost but also had a scare. Jose Guillen was hit on the right wrist with an 0-1 pitch with one out in the ninth inning and was taken to a hospital for X-rays, but the results were negative. He is listed as day-to-day with a bruise. (AP)

O's Swept by Devil Rays

ORIOLES | Casey Fossum took a three-hitter into the seventh inning, and Carl Crawford broke open a close game with a two-run homer in the eighth to help the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat Baltimore 6-2 Sunday and finish a sweep of the struggling Orioles.

Jorge Cantu had an RBI double and Toby Hall snapped a fourth-inning tie with a run-scoring single off Erik Bedard (5-2) to help Fossum overcome solo homers by Sammy Sosa and Sal Fasano.

Sosa's fourth-inning shot was his 585th, moving him within one of Frank Robinson for fifth on the career list. Fasano's ninth of the season gave the Orioles a 1-0 lead in the third.

The loss extended Baltimore's second-longest losing streak this season to five games. The Orioles lost six straight June 20-26.

Bedard allowed three runs and nine hits over six innings in his second start since coming off the disabled list. He was sidelined with a sprained ligament in his left knee.

Baltimore Waits on Nevin's OK

Padres slugger has until Tuesday night to agree to planned deal

ORIOLES | Padres slugger Phil Nevin has until Tuesday night to decide whether to accept a proposed trade to the Baltimore Orioles for pitcher Sidney Ponson.

Nevin flew home from Philadelphia with the NL West-leading Padres after they lost their seventh straight game, and planned to spend Monday's off day discussing the deal with his family.

Nevin has the right to block a trade to eight teams, including the Orioles.

Nevin didn't play in Sunday's 5-1 loss to the Phillies as the Padres fell to 0-6 on an East Coast road trip and to just one game over .500.

"I have a certain amount of time to make a decision and I'm going to use that time," Nevin said afterward. "I want to talk about it with my family and kids. It's a tough thing to talk to them about over the phone."

In December 2002, Nevin blocked a deal that would have sent him to the Reds. BERNIE WILSON (AP)

Americans claim 3rd Gold Cup on penalty kicks

SOCCER | The United States won the CONCACAF Gold Cup for the third time, beating Panama 3-1 on penalty kicks following a scoreless tie in Sunday's final.

Santino Quaranta, Landon Donovan and Brad Davis converted penalty kicks for the Americans, while goalkeeper Kasey Keller stopped the opening shot from Luis Tejada and allowed just one penalty, to Felipe Baloy. Panama's Jorge Luis Dely Valdes hit the crossbar and Alberto Blanco put his shot over the bar.

Only one of the Americans failed to convert his penalty kick, with Chris Armas sending the ball right to goalkeeper Jaime Penedo.

The United States also won this tournament, the championship of soccer's North and Central American and Caribbean region, in 1991 and 2002. The Americans, ranked sixth in the world, dominated Panama to win 3-0 in a World Cup qualifier last month at Panama City. But they struggled against the No. 83-ranked team in the Gold Cup final. GETTING THE CALL: After Lance Armstrong won his seventh Tour, President Bush called to congratulate his fellow Texan for "a great triumph of the human spirit," saying the victory was "a testament not only to your athletic talent, but to your courage."

Armstrong's Last, Triumphant Ride

With 7th straight win at Tour de France, Texan retires on top

CYCLING | One last time, "The Star-Spangled Banner" rang out over the Champs-Elysees in honor of Lance Armstrong.

One last time, on the podium against the backdrop of the Arc de Triomphe, the cancer survivor who became the greatest cyclist in Tour de France history slipped into the leader's yellow jersey Sunday. This time, it was the winner's jersey, for an unprecedented seventh consecutive year.

He held his yellow cap over his heart as the American anthem played, and his twin 3-year-old daughters, Grace and Isabelle, wore matching yellow dresses.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Lance Armstrong passes the Arc de Triomphe en route to his seventh straight Tour de France win Sunday.

It was the end of Armstrong's amazing career, and in retiring a winner he achieved a rare feat in sports — going out on top. He said his decision was final and that he walks away with no regrets.

"I'm finished," Armstrong told a motorcycle-born TV reporter as he rode a victory lap of the Champs-Elysees, waving to the crowds and accompanied by another rider waving the Stars and Stripes.

On Monday, he'll be on a beach in the south of France, "with a beer, having a blast," he said.

With the pavement slick from rain, and Armstrong comfortably ahead, he was declared the winner with 30 miles to go. Alexandre Vinokourov of Kazakhstan eventually won the final stage, with Armstrong finishing safely in the pack to win the Tour by more than 4 minutes, 40 seconds over Ivan Basso of Italy. The 1997 Tour winner, Jan Ullrich, was third, 6:21 back.

JOB: Member of the Washington Wizards dance team

SALARY: It's a part-time job, with newbies earning about $40 a game. Appearances at promotional and commercial events offer extra cash.

EDUCATION: Bachelor's in psychology from Spelman College in Atlanta.

WHAT SHE DOES: The dance team performs at all 41 Wizards home games, entertaining the crowd with two choreographed sets and shorter routines in between. Members spend eight hours a week practicing, plus an hour before each game, to nail down both their sets and the general synchronized dance moves they break out to match whatever music happens to be playing. The squad also works on six community promotions (individual members can do as many as they want for possible extra dough). "You can be in grand openings of stores or buildings, go to car shows or put in appearances at elementary schools. We do a lot of charity walks or other benefits for good causes."

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? If you like dancing, sure, but curb those fanciful visions of glory. "The season is very long, and it can get tedious," Byrd said. "Everyone tends to glamorize it, but it's still a job." And an extra job, at that: All 18 members of last season's team had full-time careers or were full-time students. (Byrd is working on a master's in social work at Howard University.) It doesn't always end with the season, either. "Just when you're ready for it to be over, you know, they go and make the playoffs."

HOW YOU CAN GET HER JOB: You can attend the last audition-prep class tonight at Bally's in Wheaton; it's not required, but is strongly recommended. Auditions start August 5 at the MCI Center. Byrd simply attended a tryout session and ended up with a spot. "You have to have some idea of technique and some sort of training, whether it's in ballet, or gymnastics or jazz dancing." But beyond that, "it's not who you know at all. You can know everybody, it doesn't matter," Byrd said. "It's all based on if you have the talent. If you have it, and you can show it, you can walk off the street and be on the court a few months later."

I have a colleague who is overly enthusiastic. Every e-mail she sends me is way over the top, telling me what a wonderful job I've done and offering to take over high-profile work because she knows how busy I am. How can I make sure she doesn't volunteer her way into my job?

Make sure to stand up for yourself if it looks like she's taking over a project of yours. Keep a wary eye on her, but don't focus on it too much. You do, and you might start taking your eye off your own great work. Probably best if you ignore her and keep going the way you are. It looks like it's working out for you.

CHANGE IS BAD: "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" and "Wedding Crashers" held off all comers to retain the top two spots at the weekend box office. Bad news for the comedy remake "The Bad News Bears" and the sci-fi thriller "The Island."

WAR STORIES: With the war officially over but casualties still piling up, "Over There" will strike a nerve among many viewers.

From the Front

'Over There' sets out to tell all the truths about fighting in Iraq

HERE | Steven Bochco's "Over There," premiering Wednesday night at 10 p.m. on FX, depicts with stark reality the experiences of American GIs serving in Iraq, as well as the effect on those left back home.

"We're trying to do something different from what you see on the news or in documentaries," explained co-creator Chris Gerolmo.

"We don't shy away from showing the level of pain that I think the soldiers are going through ... as well as see what happens to their families," said Luke Macfarlane, who plays Pvt. Frank "Dim" Dumphy, a Cornell graduate who's left behind a crumbling marriage and a troubled stepson.

The series also seeks to offer an honest view of who's serving in today's armed forces.

"Chris and I asked ourselves, 'What's the general makeup of the military?'" Bochco said. "We want it to be representative of the military in the real world."

Keith Robinson, who's black and plays Angel, describes his character as a "God-fearing country boy from Arkansas who has dreams of being a singer in a choir, but, failing that, joined the Army."

The show's combat team is lead by hard-edged Staff Sgt. Chris "Sgt. Scream" Silas, played by Erik Palladino.

"He's a guy from Long Island who, in our first episode, has served for a year and was supposed to be getting out, but is forced to serve another 90 days," Palladino said. "He's not happy about it, but ... he's got a job to do."

An Arab-American in the unit, Tariq Nassiri, deals with a reality many such soldiers face in the Middle East.

"He's an American, and he's willing to die for America, but he is aware of his heritage," said Omid Abtahi, who plays Nassiri, and whose brother is a member of the U.S. military serving in Iraq.

Made without the cooperation of the Pentagon, the show does employ a military adviser, former Marine Staff Sgt. Sean Bunch, himself a veteran of Iraq service.

Bunch put the actors through a week of "boot camp" before the show's pilot episode, and he advises cast and crew on everything from the proper way to hold firearms to a soldier's likely emotional response.

"We want to, at the very least, make it look as authentic as possible," said Macfarlane. "It's really important to all of us that we do these servicemen honor by showing them in an accurate portrayal of what they do on a day-to-day basis." MATT HURWITZ (AP)

A Tropical Cacaphony of Voices

Yerba Buena's gritty urban symphony, with swaying palm trees

MUSIC | The skyscrapers that cover Manhattan make it easy to forget the bustling borough is an island. And, with the influx of Latin immigrants of recent years, life on this island is growing more tropical.

A listen to the second album, "Island Life" (Razor & Tie), from Yerba Buena, the eclectic New York-based collective, is like walking through the jungle of Latin sounds echoing across the island these days: salsa, merengue, hip-hop, funk, samba, cumbia, Gypsy, even Middle Eastern flavors, as on "Belly Dancer." (The lamenting voice of flamenco singer Diego "El Cigala" on "Corazon Bandolero" is exquisite.)

The group, led by producer and performer Andres Levin, is winning fans for its raucous live shows, where musical stars are known to join them on stage. The energy of these concerts comes through strong on "Island Life" as well, making one feel sweaty just by listening.

The bilingual lyrics are sly and funny, such as John Leguizamo's slick-talking intro to "Sugar Daddy," or the mantra "two tongues are better than one" on "Bilingual Girl."

Yerba Buena is uniting a polyglot New York into a joyful, sexy and smart voice. What could be more American?

NOT FUNNY HA-HA: Kudrow with co-star Jesse Bradford in "Happy Endings."

'Happy' Move For Kudrow

MIXED EMOTIONS | Following her long run on "Friends," Lisa Kudrow hasn't stopped working.

In partnership with writer-producer Dan Bucatinsky, she's been producing pilots and starring in the HBO series "The Comeback." She has been even able to fit in some time on the big screen with a starring role in Don Roos' "Happy Endings," a dysfunctional comedy whose ensemble cast includes Tom Arnold, Jesse Bradford, Laura Dern, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Steve Coogan, David Sutcliffe and Jason Ritter.

Kudrow, who also starred in Roos' 1998 comedy "The Opposite of Sex," explained the beginnings of "Happy Endings."

Did Don Roos write this role with you in mind?

Well, we hung around together in my dressing room during my tapings of "Friends." I knew what he was doing. He was working on a script and I would get kind of, "Eek!" He would say, "Yes, there's a part for you." It then fell apart four times before it got made. So it wasn't like, "I have something for you." I can't guarantee money back for a studio. I knew that just because Don wanted me to play a character didn't mean that I would get that role.

Well, you're starring in your own show. Well, because I partnered up with [writer-director] Michael Patrick King. I mean I partner up with certain people.

That's a smart move.

Ha, ha ... I'm not dumb. I'm not dumb.

How do those roles find you?

Oh, because I played dumb-asses a lot. In "Mad About You" I played a very dumb waitress and they saw me.

Did you get a big romantic moment with Tom Arnold in the movie?

Yes we did! We went swimming and kissing in the pool. I think I made out with everyone in the movie except for Maggie and Laura ... and ... and ... all right not everybody.

Do you want to keep doing TV?

I don't know. I like doing "The Comeback." One thing I see is that I just do a Don Roos movie every year.

Do you watch "Joey"?

I love Matt and I love Joey. So, you know, I don't know. PETERSON GONZAGA (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

Big Screen for Biggie

The slain rapper is to become the subject of a Hollywood movie

BIOPICS | Fox Searchlight says it has secured the rights to a film about slain rapper Notorious B.I.G.

The studio is in negotiations with Antoine Fuqua to direct the biopic. Cheo Hodari Coker, who wrote the biography "Unbelievable: The Life, Death, and Afterlife of the Notorious B.I.G.," has been tapped to write the script.

The studio's president, Peter Rice, called B.I.G.'s life "a unique human story."

The rapper, whose real name was Christopher Wallace, was also known to fans as Biggie Smalls. He was gunned down March 9, 1997, after a music-industry party in Los Angeles. The case remains unsolved.

His mother, Voletta, said in a statement that while several documentaries have been made "about Biggie the rapper ... nobody knows Christopher the human being."

"Searchlight gave us the opportunity to really be able to come in and tell the story the way it was supposed to be told," said Wayne Barrow, the rapper's former co-manager. "It's not just a hip-hop film, it's a film of life and a film of love."

Meanwhile, a Hollywood ending has yet to be reached in the legal case surrounding Wallace's death. Earlier this month, a federal judge declared a mistrial in the wrongful death lawsuit that his family filed against the city of Los Angeles, alleging police officials covered up officers' involvement in the murder. Wallace family lawyer Perry Sanders Jr. has said the lawsuit will likely be refiled. (AP)

A Sad Twist of Fate

An unusual drama gets the characters' complications right

DRAMA | As “The Dive From Clausen’s Pier” (9 p.m., Lifetime) begins, Carrie (Michelle Trachtenberg) is clearly restless. She appears to be on the verge of breaking up with her longtime boyfriend and fiancé, Mike (Rob Estes).

When they gather with friends for their regular Memorial Day blast, she's clearly tired of the same old jokes, the familiar stories and the suffocating role of being one-half of a small town's ALONE IN THE BIG CITY: Trachtenberg's Carrie is gonna make it after all.

“golden couple.”

Carrie clearly wants change, and soon everything does. After she storms off with a friend, Mike dives off the pier into icy water. He doesn't notice how shallow the lake has become, and breaks his neck in the process.

With Mike paralyzed, Carrie is suddenly called upon to stand by her man. Her reluctance to visit and care for Mike shocks his family and her friends.

Trachtenberg does a fine job of portraying a young woman trying to bottle unspeakable fears, resentments and confusion. Carrie may not be entirely likeable, but she is a fully realized, interesting character, and truer to life than most TV movie heroines. KEVIN MCDONOUGH

Gaming

Video game creators are mostly men, and women say it shows

Tara Teich enjoys nothing more than slipping into the role of a female video game character. But the 26-year-old software programmer gets annoyed by the appearance of such digital alter egos as the busty tomb raider Lara Croft or the belly-baring Wu the Lotus Blossom of "Jade Empire."

Don't even get her started on the thong-bikini babes that the male gunmen win as prizes in "Grand Theft Auto," which was sent to stores with hidden sex scenes left embedded on the discs by programmers.

Rockstar Games belatedly took responsibility for the scenes this week after the industry's ratings board re-rated the game "Adults Only."

"I wish they were wearing more clothes," said Teich, a lifelong game enthusiast who now helps create games.

Why, she asks, must women in video games always look like Las Vegas show girls?

Tammy Yap, a game programmer for six years, once asked that of a colleague — after all, the skimpy clothing and exaggerated body parts might offend some women, she told him. His response: "What difference does it make? Women don't play video games."

The data on who plays games are actually quite consistent — men account for 70 percent of the players of games written for consoles (such as Xbox and PlayStation2), said Schelley Olhava, an analyst with the research group IDC. "Those numbers have changed little in the past seven years," she said.

Women could be a rich area for growth — if the $10 billion video game industry figures out what games they want.

But their point of view often goes unheard.

"There's no question that we need more diversity," said Jason Della Rocca, executive director of the International Game Developers Association. "We're saying that we need to grow the business and broaden the audience and yet the game creators are still mostly young white males."

While Olhava says 10 percent of all software engineers in the technology industry are women, that figure is just 4 percent in the video game field, according to Della Rocca.

"I've never worked with another woman programmer," said Yap, 28, who has been at three companies in six years.

She likes her male co-workers at Midway Home Entertainment Inc. in San Diego, but "sometimes it gets lonely."

Teich and Yap said the industry doesn't have to be so male-oriented.

They cite the success of "The Sims," a decidedly nonviolent role-playing game, as proof that tapping into the women's market means big bucks.

Redwood City, Calif.-based Electronic Arts Inc. has sold more than 54 million units of the Sims, generating more than $1 billion in sales since it launched in 2000. It's the best-selling PC game of all time, and about 55 percent of the buyers were women, said EA spokeswoman Tammy Schachter.

"We're definitely very motivated to find more ways to get women into the industry," Schachter said. "This is not something we can solve overnight." GREG SANDOVAL (AP)

Readers take charge, skipping home pages for articles they want

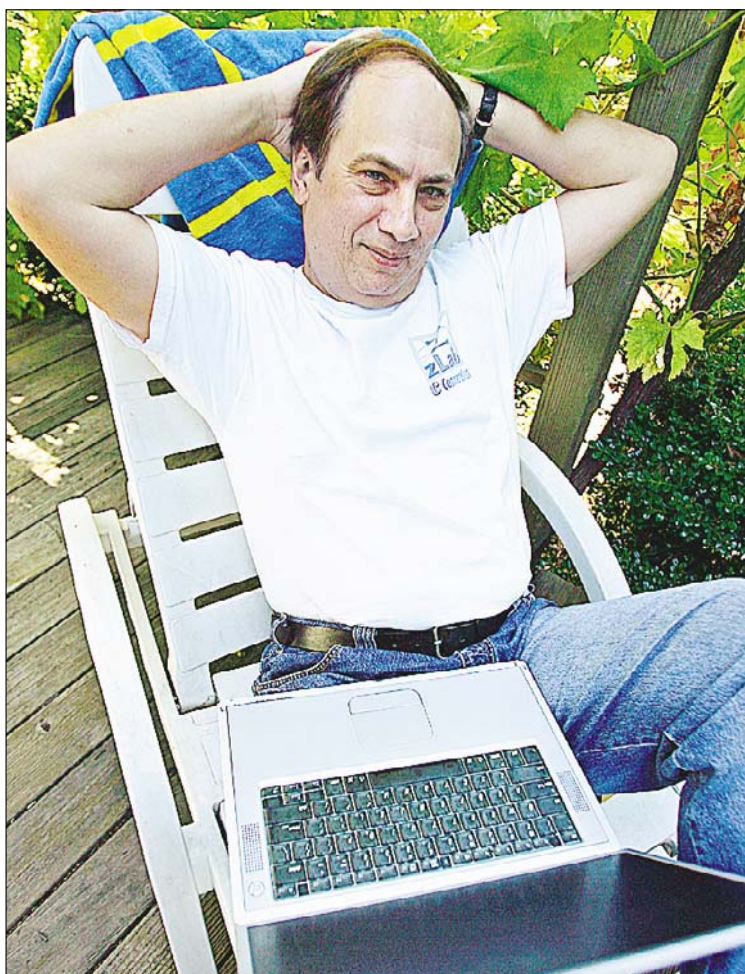

J.D. Lasica used to visit 20 to 30 Web sites for his daily fix of news. Now, he's down to three. Yet he consumes more news than ever.

Lasica is among a growing breed of information consumers who use the latest Internet technologies to completely bypass the home pages of news sites and jump directly to articles that interest them.

He can scan some 200 Web journals and traditional news sites — all without actually going out and visiting them.

Online news consumers are increasingly taking charge. Rarely do they depend on a single news organization's vision of the day's top stories.

"The old idea of surfers coming to your Web site and coming to your front door, that's going away," said Lasica, a former editor at The Sacramento Bee. "People are going to come in through the side window, through the basement, through the attic, any way they want to.”

In a case of “if you can’t beat them, join them,” Knight Ridder Inc., Gannett Co. and Tribune Co. collectively bought three-quarters of Topix.net, a startup that provides tools for readers to bypass news home pages. The New York Times has been paying an undisclosed amount to have its headlines featured there.

Topix provides direct links to news stories it collects and sorts from more than 10,000 sources, and it slices story by category as well as region, down to the ZIP code.

A news aggregation service from Google Inc. scans more than 4,500 English sources and uses software to rank and display stories to which it links, while America Online Inc. and Yahoo Inc. offer services that rely more on humans.

Yahoo News, rather than trying to keep readers from leaving, provides easy access to articles elsewhere using Really Simple Syndication, or RSS, a technology that immediately notifies users of new entries on their favorite news sites and Web journals.

News outlets are starting to add tools to untether readers from home pages. The Associated Press, Reuters and others, for example, are adding RSS support so readers can use tools like Yahoo’s to access stories directly.

At The New York Times’ Web site, referrals from RSS feeds account for only 2 percent of traffic but represent the fastest growth — 8.5 million page views in June compared with about a half million in late 2003.

But aggregators and feeds also potentially let readers select only the topics they care about, ignoring other developments editors might deem important, said Lee Rainie, director of the Pew Internet and American Life Project.

Cool off with hot resort looks

AS ONE OF THE ONLY DESIGNERS from Olympus Fashion Week to also take the runway at the Sunglass Hut Miami Swim Shows presented by LYCRA, Carmen Marc Valvo had great expectations resting on his shoulders. Those wondering if a resortwear swim show could be more than just eye candy on the runway looked to the designer for direction, inspiration and a wearable sarong.

Carmen did not disappoint. Besides inventive beach wraps like a coral mini-kimono in pink silk, the designer also created tankinis and one-piece gathered halter suits in chocolate brown and black that mirrored Marilyn Monroe's busty look in "Some Like It Hot." He also showed that some swimwear can look hot at the beach or paired with a slim pair of stiff-legged blue jeans. "This is more lifestyle, be fabulous," the designer exclaimed. "My lady is sophisticated. She's well traveled, she's chic, and she's stylish. She's not going chicky boom boom down the runway. No, no!"

Models at Carmen's show included runway favorites like May Andersen and Martinique from Project Runway.

As for Carmen Marc Valvo's newest collection, it should be coming soon to a store near you, but not for long — this stuff will soon be flying off resortwear racks.

For Clock-Watchers

Face it: tracking the second hand's slooow rotation won't make it move any faster. But a clock with character—or, in this case, characters—just might do the trick. Available in beige and robin's egg blue, the YOSHITOMO NARA FLIP CLOCK, designed by Japanese pop artist Yoshitomo Nara features 84 original drawings, one for each hour and minute of the day ($250 at cerealart.com). Like a punk fairytale on parade, devilishly innocent children, eerily cute animals, and cryptic sayings revolve into view with each passing minute. You'll be so mesmerized, you'll never notice the time fly by. (THE DAILY)

Beauty

Fight the File

As far back as nail-conscious individuals can remember, the cursed nail file has wreaked havoc on purses, indiscriminately scratching and scraping with its coarse, untamed body. Cell phones, leather wallets and PDAs beware! The file spares nothing in her quest to maim. But worry no more, the FILE CATTY is here ($5 at flowery.com, beauty supply stores and salons). The translucent case contains the file, setting it loose only to grind away at innocent nails. While we honestly found this item a little excessive—a dirty Kleenex serves the same purpose—we respect that, for some, this is product nirvana.

Quad Rugby

MARK ZUPAN, star of the documentary "Murderball," about the occasionally violent sport of wheelchair rugby, was online Friday | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

How are you guys able to maneuver and not fall out? You also seem to have a lot more mobility than people such as Christopher Reeve.

We are strapped into our chairs. That's why we don't fall out. The reason we're different from Christopher Reeve is I broke my neck lower than he did.

Both reviews I have read refer to the athletes as quadriplegics, yet they all appear to be propelling their wheelchairs with their arms. The athletes are actually paraplegics, then, correct?

The definition of quadriplegic means impairment in all four limbs, it does not mean no mobility or no function or a complete paralysis in all four limbs. So, no, we are not paraplegics, hence the name quad rugby.

Is there anyone on your team who uses a motorized wheelchair or are only manuals allowed?

No motorized chairs, all manual. For motorized, there's power soccer. I became interested in rugby a month after I was hurt. I played college soccer and high school football.

How many quad rugby players/teams are there and have there been any studies tracking new injuries?

I think right now there are 30-something teams in the U.S. and around 500 players. I don't know if there are studies, but I don't know of anyone who's hurt their neck again playing. We're not that fragile. My neck is probably stronger now than it was when I got hurt.

Are there any female wheelchair rugby players?

Yes, there are.

What's your individual training regimen outside of team practices?

I work a 50-hour week job and spend 10-15 hours per week in the gym lifting weights. And 10 hours a week in my chair doing endurance stuff, along with practice.

Do you see yourself as a role model for others with spine injuries?

If people want to view me as a role model. I'm just here showing there are other things in life to do than sit there and ponder over your injury. There's a whole other world out there. Have fun with it. If I'm viewed as a role model, that's fine. If I'm not, it doesn't bother me any.

How did you break your neck?

I was 18 and I got thrown out of the back of a pick-up truck and spent 14 hours in a canal hanging onto a branch until somebody found me.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone whose opinion you respect may actually turn the tables and ask you for advice. Don't hold back; give it freely and honestly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't project your feelings onto someone else. Take the behavior of others at face value, and you can avoid unnecessary trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Someone you work with may surprise you with an unexpected phone call or an invitation to take part in something unusual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) This is a good day to make your feelings known to those they most concern, no matter how personal they may be. Be open, honest and up front.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Waste-not-want-not. Try to use all your resources before beginning the search for the new and as-yet untried.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may need to take over and be responsible for someone else's major duties. Stay on your toes and be ready to rise to the occasion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Reward yourself for your recent hard work on an important project. You deserve to treat yourself to something nice and out of the ordinary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may have to clean up after your own mess in more than one sense. Someone close to you may call upon you to be accountable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be disappointed by an experiment. Never fear; lessons learned as a result will keep you from making the same mistake twice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have to re-trace your steps to plug any holes you may have left as a result of haste or inadequate preparation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's time once again to focus on yourself — your own needs and desires, principally. You risk hurting only yourself by letting yourself be scattered.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a good day for a re-affirmation of your affections or, more importantly, one specific personal commitment. You'll have no doubts or fears.

DO show the world the heights of your hubris — put your face on a postage stamp. Custom T-shirt maker Zazzle will sell you actual U.S. postage stamps with your noble visage (or someone else's). A single sheet of 20 37-cent stamps is $17 at zazzle.com/stamps. Go mail yourself a letter.

Media Circuses Found To Cause Health Problems

JERMAINE JACKSON told reporters his brother's child molestation trial left the star too exhausted to attend their father's birthday bash in a Berlin hotel. "That's fine, he was very tired and he's resting," Jermaine said. "His case tore him apart mentally. He's very strong mentally, but he needs his rest right now." (AP)

Courtney Doing Well

A Los Angeles judge has praised COURTNEY LOVE for making progress in a court-ordered drug treatment program. Love didn't appear in court, but her lawyer said that after reviewing her case, a judge concluded that she was "progressing well." The hearing took place less than 48 hours after Love was reportedly taken to a hospital when she reported feeling faint at an industry party. The nature of her illness was not disclosed. (AP)

Next: Polanski Sues Over Allegation of Creepy Staring

The woman at the center of ROMAN POLANSKI's libel suit against Vanity Fair says the magazine was wrong. On Friday, London's High Court ruled in favor of Polanski, who sued over an article accusing him of propositioning Beate Telle, a Norwegian model, on the way to the funeral of his wife, Sharon Tate. Telle, who didn't testify, told The Mail newspaper this never happened. "He never spoke to me at all," she said. He "just stood there. He just stared at me for ages. ... Perhaps I reminded him of Sharon Tate." (AP)

PUBLIC ART

Quentin Tarantino Expected to Take Credit

Hong Kong will mark kung-fu movie legend BRUCE LEE's 65th birthday in November with a bronze statue, the Bruce Lee Club said Saturday. Wong Yiu-keung, chairman of the Hong Kong fan club, said it will be the first statue of Bruce Lee in a public place in the world. Lee died in 1973 at 32. (AP)

Were the great Bruce Lee alive today, he'd kick Jackie Chan's sorry little butt.

GOODBYE

Unionized Labor Shall Never Again Be So Scorchingly Hot

MELISSA GILBERT will step down as president of the Screen Actors Guild, Reuters reported. The former star of "Little House on the Prairie" said Thursday she wouldn't run for a third term. "The past four years have been remarkable — at times frustrating — but incredibly rewarding," Gilbert said in a statement. "It is no big secret that there are problems within the leadership of SAG. There are rifts that may very well be irreparable." Reuters said possible candidates include Morgan Fairchild and Alan Rosenberg, husband of "CSI" star Marg Helgenberger. (EXPRESS)
